Hot Slut Of The Day!

Diana Nyad, the 61-year-old long-distance swimming legend who dove into the waters off the coast of Havana on Sunday and tried to once again become the first human being on the face of the planet to swim 103 miles to Florida without a shark cage. To make a long swim short, Diana had to make like Ke$ha's court-appointed groomer and quit that bitch, because the conditions made it impossible for her to continue on.

The swim was supposed to take around 60 hours and People says that Diana last 29 hours before she raised the white flag. Diana's team says she was barfing in the sea water and the strong winds and swells caused pain in her shoulder. Diana said that she is not making a sad about it and knows it was the right thing to do. This was Diana's second time at the "swim your ass from Cuba to Florida" rodeo. In 1979, Diana tried to complete the swim, but she didn't make it.

Diana told reporters that she wanted to do it again to show hos that 60 is the new 40. Diana still showed us! Meanwhile, I'm showing hos that 30 is the new 60 since I barely walk 103 steps in a 60 hour period (Thank GOD for desk chair toilets and refrigerated file cabinets).

By the way, one of my ex-boyfriend's grandma is Cuban and she would always tell me (after a few bottles of Chateau Diane, of course) about how her older brother did the Fidel Castro Flee by coming to Florida from Havana on some kind of inner tube that deflated halfway. She said that he had to

I can relate to the "30 is the new 60" thing, though I'm not quite there yet. I'm really hoping that when I'm older I start "taking charge" of life and being all exuberant about it, like some of these people. That's the only hope I really have.

Regardless, kudos to Diana. At 60 years old she can swim for 29 hours, in a rough ocean--some of you grouchypusses can say whatever you want, but that's pretty amazing. As a capable 60-year-old woman, I think it makes sense for her to test her limits. The rest of us will probably be bragging about how we raked the yard all by ourselves.

Yes Americans are allowed in Cuba. Cuba allows Americans to enter Cuba, but our government doesn't allow us to go to Cuba without a special license which says you're going there as a journalist or for educational or

I have a few family friends/relatives who have done the trip from cuba to miami in a tube or a fucked up wooden boat or whatever they could get their hands on. It's not an easy trip and is a HUGE risk even in a regular small boat if you get hit by any weather. When I read this story yesterday I laughed my ass off.

This woman is so bored with her pretty little life that she tries to do something many only do because they have no other choice.

White people are funny. You'll never hear of Maria swimming for thirty hours or Nacho falling down the mountain. Hell no. The Lone Ranger got it wrong, we aren't the tontos. Whoever looks at the fucking ocean and says, hmmm, I wonder where that goes? I think I can make it! Derr.

This story reminds me of the movie North Face. I'm gonna give spoilers but it's going to be a service believe me. At the end of that two hour movie, the two loser climbers who, we as audience are made to believe were some kind of climbing heroes, they fail to climb the mountain and they die. Yes, they cannot climb the fucking mountain, and they die and there is a movie made about their failure but it's shot as if it's a great story about will and they will climb to the top at the end of the damn movie, so you watch until the end. This story is just like that.

Still kudos to the old lady who could swim for 30 hours. My personal best time is 30 minutes :)

Fuck swimming that long. We had to swim 5 kilometers as part of our lifeguard class and by km 3 i thought my arms were falling off. And that was in a pool. Good for crazy lady up there, but i don't get the "let me risk my life to prove a point" mentality.

I remember reading about her when I was in elementary school. It was a reading comprehension state exam. She did it in a cage first, but she still had problems with the jellyfish stings in her FACE. That story really stuck with me. Not because she accomplished an amazing feat, but because bitch got stung in her FACE. I got stung on my toe and I quit swimming in two inch deep water for the rest of the day. I can't imagine getting stung in your FACE
